STOW DRAMA: Land Rover used by four masked men to smash shop's window

Cash machine is stolen in ram raid attack on store

By Richard Duggan
richard.duggan@essexlive.news

A WORKER from a Harlow shopping precinct has branded the area as an "easy target" for thieves.

The comments were made just six hours after four men carried out a ram raid burglary on the Premier Store, in The Stow, at about 4am last Monday.

The assailants, who hid their faces and wore dark clothing, were seen removing the free-standing ATM after using a stolen green Land Rover to smash into the shop's window.

Footage captured by a resident shows the group dragging and shoving the cash machine into the boot of a dark coloured Ford Focus.

Two members of the group drove off in the Ford while the remaining pair fled the scene in a dark blue BMW saloon which was parked nearby.

Investigating officers have now confirmed the BMW, which was also stolen, was ditched in The Ridings shortly after the heist.

Shock

Residents were quick to voice their shock and disappointment at the crime taking place in The Stow.

Workers from various different businesses at the centre have also shared their views, with some taking a matter-of-fact approach to the situation.

A member of staff at Appliance Care said: "It's unfortunate that it's happened in The Stow but it happens everywhere."

"These are the times we live in but it's just something you have to put up with."

"We just get on with life and our work."

This viewpoint was also echoed by a member of the team at Fashion Avenue.

However, one worker in the area, who asked to remain anonymous, believes the shopping centre is very susceptible to crime.

The front of the store was badly damaged by the raiders ible to crime.

"It's very unfortunate for the area but it's an easy target," she said. "We just thank God we don't have a cash machine."

Residents who were not woken by the fracas opened their curtains the next morning to find a number of police officers at the scene, with a cordon in place which encompassed the stolen 4x4.

Photos from the scene showed the shutters had been ripped away from the Premier's entrance, with debris scattered across the pavement.

Speaking about how the crime has taken its toll on residents and workers, Hassan Djenan, operations manager at the Harlow Dry Cleaners 2, said: "It has had an impact on the whole of the community."

"The convenience store here is used quite regularly, throughout the day and the night."

"There's police all around and we are so shocked by what's happened."

"I really do feel for the owner of the store - he's lost a whole day's business."

Anyone with information is asked to call Harlow CID on 101.

Alternatively, contact independent crime-fighting charity Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111 or www.crimestoppers-uk.org.

RESIDENTS' REACTION

RESIDENTS have been left reeling after a shop was targeted by ram-raiding thieves.

The Premier convenience store, in The Stow shopping precinct, was subject to a ram raid burglary at about 4am on Monday.

One resident, who lives opposite the shop, claimed the store's cash machine was targeted.

Speaking on the condition of anonymity, she said: "I was asleep and the crash woke me up."

"I thought that it was a car crash then I heard a lot of shouting and dragging and looked out because I thought people were trying to help someone trapped in a car or something."

"As I looked out there were four masked hooded men struggling to lift the ATM machine into the boot of a dark car. Then two men ran off and two others drove off with the machine."

The witness has also expressed her "shock" at the incident taking place so close to where she lives.

Worse

"At first I was worried in case the car caught fire or something right outside my home - the car they used to ram the shop is still out there with its engine running," she added.

"Now I think it's quite disappointing that The Stow will get an even worse name when residents and shop owners all pull together to make it a happy, helpful place."

Photos from the scene show the shutters have been ripped away from the Premier's entrance, with debris scattered across the pavement.

Officers cordoned off the area and within the cordon was a 4x4 vehicle.

Another local, who asked not to be named, said: "It woke the whole street up I think, it was so loud when they were ramming the shop."

Essex Police have been approached for comment.

ANNUAL CELEBRATION: Characters from town's upcoming panto join Father Stars out in force to give lights switch-on huge sprinkling of most festive cheer

By Tom Bage

tom.bage@essexlive.news

THE stars were out in force at Harlow's annual Christmas lights event at The Water Gardens last weekend.

Joining Father Christmas up on stage were characters from the upcoming Peter Pan pantomime at the Playhouse, alongside Elsa and Olaf impersonators.

Locals were out in force to enjoy the event on a crisp winter evening.

Unique

The entertainment began at 4pm with local singer and pianist Andres Cruz opening the show with some unique cover hits and festive numbers, closely followed by Rock Choir with an exciting song set.

Shortly after, the cast of the Peter Pan panto gave the assembled children a preview of their show live on stage, and dance group Hip Hip Pop took the crowds through to Santa's big moment.

This festive season will also see Harlow play host to the Coca-Cola truck for the second Christmas running on November 30.

There will also be a free giant snow globe on December 7 at the Water Gardens and a free ice skating rink at the Harvey Centre on December 14.

Simon Plumb, centre manager at The Water Gardens, said: "We're very excited about the launch of Christmas here at the Water Gardens."

"Our annual light switch-on is always a spectacular event."

Throughout the festive season from November 30 onwards, the town will have late-night shopping events every Thursday evening.

People of all ages enjoyed the entertainment as Harlow's Christmas lights were switched on

Van driver arrested after Transit hits back of lorry

Police take person into custody after multi-vehicle accident on M11

By Matthew Mohan-Hickson

matthew.hickson@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A PERSON has been arrested after a multi-vehicle crash on the M11 which saw a Transit van smash into the back of a lorry.

The accident, which also involved two other cars and a second lorry, happened between Junction 7, for Harlow, and Junction 6, for the M25, on Tuesday.

Essex Police Southern Roads Policing unit tweeted to say that the driver of the van had been arrested and taken off to custody because the vehicle already had a prohibition and no insurance.

Damage

The account also tweeted pictures of the crash, which show the front of the van suffering severe damage having crashed into the back of a lorry.

A second picture showed the other vehicles also involved in the crash, although they do not appear to be as badly damaged as the van.

A vehicle also struck the central reservation between junctions 9 and 8 on Wednesday.

Eighth most costly town in Essex to buy a home

HARLOW is the eighth most expensive town in Essex to purchase a new home.

A new tool has been spotted online that indicates on average how much you need to buy a property in certain places across Essex – along with how much you need to earn to be able to afford a house.

As reported previously by Essex Live, Web-Blinds have created a handy new tool that tells you exactly how much you need to earn on average per hour, per week and per annum.

The tool says that on average, to buy a house in Harlow, you would need to earn £20.79 per hour, £779.63 per week or £40,540.50 per annum.

Expensive

According to these statistics, Billericay is one of the most expensive places in Essex to live in the list of 14 Essex towns and cities that were tested, while Clacton-on-Sea is the cheapest.

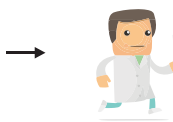

You need a fair amount stored in the bank account to own a residential property in Billericay, with an earning of £31.72 per hour, £1,189.50 per week or £61,854 per annum required on average.

It works out that it will cost an average £482.25 per week or £25,077 per annum to buy a house in Clacton.

Pudsey clocks up the miles for good cause

Bus driver Paul suited and booted to aid Children In Need

By Piers Meyler
piers.meyler@essexlive.news

IT'S not every day that you get driven around by a man dressed in a massive bear suit.

But that is exactly what happened to Harlow commuters on Friday when they jumped on the number 2, 3 or 10 bus being driven by Paul Freeman.

The 47-year-old, who has been a bus driver for the past 22 years, raised £140 for Children in Need – contributing to this year's record breaking £50 million total – by dressing up as Pudsey.

He said: "People were quite shocked and quite amused. I've raised money for breast cancer but this is the first time I've done anything for Children in Need."

"I asked if I could do Pudsey and the bosses said it is for a good cause so do it."

Paul is now looking to do more fundraising in the lead up to Christmas, promising to carry on his tradition as dressing up as Santa the week before the big day.

Patient numbers rise but total of GPs on decline

ESSEX has seen an increase of over 20,000 patients this year, but general practitioner (GP) numbers are falling.

The NHS revealed the county had lost 80 GPs, and had just 786 full-time equivalent GPs at the end of June this year, down from 872 in March 2016. Meanwhile, the number of patients registered with a GP in the county in the same period went up by more than 23,000.

The news comes after the British Medical Association (BMA), the organisation representing the country's GPs, warned that a chronic shortage of doctors was putting patient care at risk.

The data, published by NHS England, shows that North East Essex has seen the biggest percentage decline in full-time equivalent GPs.

The area had 185 GPs in March 2016 but only 154 at the end of June this year – a drop of 17 per cent.

Patient numbers in North East Essex rose by 5,802 to 347,996 over that period.

That means each full-time GP is responsible for an average of 2,260 patients.

MPs and police in talks over M11 accidents

TWO MPs have met with a national agency to look at ways to improve safety on the M11 after a series of serious accidents.

Mark Prisk, MP for Hertford and Stortford, and Sir Oliver Heald, MP for North East Hertfordshire, both met with Highways England on Wednesday to discuss concerns over the number of accidents on the M11.

In the past year there have been a number of serious incidents, including three fatal accidents, between junction six, for the M25, and junction 8, for Bishop's Stortford.

Highways England is reviewing the stretch of the road with Essex Police to investigate the reasons behind the number of serious accidents.

Mr Prisk said: "It is clear this stretch of the M11 has become more dangerous. Traffic is rising, but the rate of accidents means more should be done to inform and manage the route."

"I welcome this review of the road and have asked for an early sight of its findings."

"Individual drivers must play their part in ensuring they drive carefully, but improvements to the signage, lane management and capacity of the M11 would be welcome."

Crashes

Essex Police earlier this year said that they were 'concerned' over the number of crashes that had occurred between the two junctions.

A motorcyclist in his 50s was killed in a crash near junction seven for Harlow on August 31, while Andrew Bett, of Sible Hedingham, was killed in an explained incident on August 9, when a piece of concrete hit his car near Birchanger.

On May 23, another motorcyclist was killed in an accident on the exit sliproad of the M11 at junction six.

Between January 1 and September 11 there were 64 collisions between junction 5 and junction 9, according to Essex Police figures.

Simon Amor, Highways England asset delivery manager, said: "Safety is Highways England's top priority, and we keep safety on the M11 under continual review. We are looking into any potential causes behind the recent increase in accidents on this stretch of the M11, and will take action on anything we find."

"We are also working closely with Essex County Council on planned improvements."

CHILDLINE AID: Essex woman's harrowing tale highlights Christmas appeal

NSPCC helper's story of abuse by godfather

By Lottie O'Neill
newsdesk@essexlive.news

AN Essex woman has spoken out about the abuse she suffered at the hands of her godfather when she was a child.

Melanie*, remembers being in a school assembly when she was just 12 years old and hearing of ChildLine for the first time and subsequently calling them.

"I didn't tell anyone else about the abuse at the time," she said.

"I didn't think that other people would believe me because my godfather was such a well-respected person.

"Talking to ChildLine lightened the burden of keeping such a big secret.

"I felt more in control and I was able to get the support I needed on my own terms."

Melanie was abused by her godfather who was close to her family, and used to go on holiday with them and stay at their house.

Her godparents did lots of fundraising for good causes and even ran the local branch of a charity with her parents.

Melanie continued: "I can't remember when my godfather started to sexually abuse me or when I started to realise that it wasn't ok.

"But I didn't really know that it was wrong because it was so normal to me, and it happened every time I went to their house."

She remembers glimmers of it not seeming right and feeling uncomfortable, but it wasn't until a school assembly that she decided to talk to someone about the abuse.

She said: "When I was about 12 years old, the deputy head at my school did an assembly about ChildLine and she gave out the number.

"It was really easy to remember.

"One day I suggested to my friends that we call ChildLine for a joke.

"I spoke to a counsellor and I gave him my real details. I told him about the abuse in a way that made it sound like I was making it up."

Worries

One in four children and teenagers who try to reach out to ChildLine by phone or online, either hang up or log off before a counsellor is able to speak to them.

NSPCC, (the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children) worries about the children who desperately reach out but failed to get through because they do not have the resources to answer every one straight away.

For some organisations a 75 per cent response rate may be acceptable but it isn't for the NSPCC.

The NSPCC also want to focus on the tens of thousands of young people who are contacting them via the website, or through phone during the peak hours between

There has been a "huge increase" in reports of emotional abuse against children, a leading children's charity has warned 4pm and 1am.

After her initial phone call with friends Melanie called again on her own: "I was just so glad to be finally sharing things with someone."

She started to phone the helpline more regularly and felt more confident that it wasn't her fault.

The counsellors helped her realise that she didn't have to feel ashamed.

"The counsellors I spoke to just let me talk and it was such a relief," she continued.

"The way they talked made me feel like they were genuinely there for me and like I was important."

Melanie eventually stopped calling the helpline after she felt able to talk about things, and it helped her stay on the right track at school and in her life.

ChildLine, run by the NSPCC, has been helping children and teenagers in their darkest hours for more than 30 years.

One in every 20 children experience sexual abuse, but many are too scared to speak out.

There were 175,000 phone calls and online chats from young people lost last year due to an increasing demand for online, evening and night-time counselling, and ChildLine didn't have the resources to pick them up quick enough whilst they were being held in a queue.

When she was 16, Melanie decided to confide in someone close to her:

Awful

"My boyfriend persuaded me to tell my parents and it was pretty awful," she said.

After she told her parents, they went to the police and the case went to court.

She added: "The defence barristers were really tough on me.

"They suggested that I had dressed provocatively and it made me start to think that it was my fault.

"I remember first hearing that my godfather had been found guilty and crying for hours."

Melanie, who now volunteers for the NSPCC Schools Service, wanted to share her story so that it could help at least one child to speak out.

Her dream is that something positive can come out of her experiences from when she was younger.

She said: "If that assembly hadn't have happened, I don't know if I would have told anyone.

"My advice to young people is to talk to ChildLine.

"It's the first step in the process of dealing with things that you're going through. They really do care."

The NSPCC has now launched its Light up Christmas for Children campaign in partnership with the Harlow Star.

It works around the clock and will continue throughout December responding to young people, some of whom will be in desperate need for protection, support and advice.

Even the smallest donations can lead to a brighter future for a young person who has, or is currently suffering in silence.

Just £4 sent via a simple text message, could pay for a counsellor to answer an extra phone call or an online chat message.

Text

Donate £4 by texting 'NSPCC 4' to 70744 or visiting www.nspcc.org.uk.

Texts costs include your donation of £4 plus your standard network rate.

To donate £12 text the code 'NSPCC 12', and to donate £20, use 'NSPCC 20', also to 70744.

The NSPCC will receive 100 per cent of your donation.

for annual party night

A POPULAR Christmas Eve party is to be held for the eighth year – at a new venue.

The Square welcomed families for years on the night before Christmas to enjoy a festive sing-song and celebrations.

Despite the venue's closure, the party will continue this year, at Club Foot, a new community venue based at Burnt Mill Academy, in Harlow.

The popular house band, made up of workers from the Square, has always been a feature of the event and will return this year, as well as local singers performing festive favourites.

Adam Smith, former promoter at the Square, is keen for the regular crowd from the Square to go along, as well as families and groups of friends yet to experience the event.

He said: "We want to make this year's party even more family friendly. There will be tables and chairs set out, with mince pies and sweets. We are also hoping to get a choir together as a support act."

Tickets are priced £5 for under 18s and £8 for over 18s.

The party starts at 7.30pm on Sunday December 24.

Stores to host food
collection

THERE will be a Tesco customer food collection at all three of the chain's Harlow stores.

The shops in Edinburgh Way, Church Langley and the Metro in the Harvey Centre will be collecting on Thursday, November 30, Friday, December 1 and Saturday, December 2.

Volunteers are needed urgently to help as Harlow Foodbank needs additional food following the implementation of Universal Credits in Harlow in July.

To meet the current increased need the foodbank needs 4.5 tonnes of donated food each month.

It is currently feeding an average of 287 people each month and 40% of them are children and in August, September and October referrals were up by 44% compared to the same period last year.

Shifts are 9am to 11am, 11am to 1pm, 1pm to 3pm and 3pm to 5pm.

Potential volunteers should give their name, contact mobile number and email address.

Academy fights back and wins after online criticism

EXTENSIVE work to ensure children with special educational needs achieve highly has earned Burnt Mill Academy national praise – from a blogger who criticised the school before seeing its work in action.

Jules Daulby, education leadership governor of national charity Driver Youth Trust, wrote a blog criticising outstanding schools for "gaming the system" when it comes to achievement and not meeting the needs of SEND students (special educational needs and disabilities) – hinting that Burnt Mill, in Harlow, was doing the same.

She told how she had listened to a headteacher giving a talk and suggesting Burnt Mill had an "unofficial no SEND policy" and saying: "Let's guess which school got the 'outstanding' grading shall we."

On reading the damning blog, Burnt Mill Academy Trust CEO Helena Mills contacted Ms Daulby and invited her to see the work that does go on with SEND students – who make up 30 per cent of the role – at the school, to put the record straight.

Ms Mills said: "I was getting so fed-up of people making statements based on anecdotes."

"I felt it was insulting to all the outstanding schools which have large numbers of SEND students and do amazing things for them. I felt aggrieved for the students, for their families and for all of the staff who go above and beyond to ensure our large number of SEND students are successful."

During the visit, Ms Daulby witnessed:

- The nurture curriculum and the opportunities it gives the most vulnerable students
- Heads of faculty and lead practitioners teaching a curriculum tailored to meet the needs of students
- Highly differentiated resources and material used to unlock students' full potential to progress

Elliott Tooley, SENDCo, said: "The visit from Jules Daulby gave us a great opportunity to celebrate the success of students with SEND and the above national average progress they make."

"We discussed a range of interventions which exist in our school, all catered to providing bespoke support for learning in many areas, including English, maths and social, emotional skills."

"The consistent measures we have in place were also commended, such as the robust planning for all SEND and teachers working on strategies and techniques for individuals."

Ms Daulby was so impressed with the school, she sent a long letter of praise which said: "As a passionate believer that all learners can access a mainstream curriculum and flourish, it was pleasing to see so much evidence of this in your school."

"I had a tour of Burnt Mill, I saw nurture groups being taught maths and MFL.

"I met with your SENDCo and deputy SENDCo and, a particular highlight for me, was meeting with students and teaching staff over lunch. It was an absolute pleasure to witness students with SEND learning, accessing a rich curriculum and being taught by a range of qualified teaching staff."

Ms Daulby said her main observations during her visit included:

- Learners with SEND are valued
- Learners with SEND are taught by qualified teachers and often the head of department
- Learners with SEND are taught MFL – "I can't tell you how refreshing this is to hear. It's a constant source of frustration to me that young people who would benefit from language learning are not given the opportunity to experience MFL"
- There are high aspirations for learners with SEND and a willingness to see other curricular activities may benefit them, theatre trips as an example
- Decisions around SEND provision are given high status from leadership

These footballers can walk the walk

MEMBERS of Harlow Young Labour and local Labour councillors hosted a charity walking football tournament in order to raise money for the Paringdon Pirates Walking Football Club.

The event, which was held at the Paringdon Sports and Social Club, was a fantastic success.

The teams all braved the cold and put on some exciting matches featuring excellent displays of skill as well as some valiant, but ultimately fruitless, efforts.

The tournament was won by The Dale Winton Walkers, who received a trophy and individual medals for their achievement.

Chris Vince, one of the event organisers and the Labour candidate for Great Parndon said: "The event was a great success bringing together the local community in an exciting way and I am so glad to have been involved in it.

"My thanks especially go to Mark Watson and his Paringdon Pirates Walking football team, the referee, Brian, who did a sterling job, all the members of Harlow Young Labour and everyone who took part on the day, including a few Harlow Labour Councillors."

Harlow Young Labour members would like to extend their thanks to everyone who supported the event. We would especially like to thank Paringdon Sports and Social Club for allowing them to host the event there and being so highly supportive of the team and the tournament.

Youngsters collect food and help give it out

CARING children took their harvest festival campaign one step further – by helping out at Harlow Foodbank.

As part of the annual festival, pupils and families of Roydon Primary School collected 15 boxes of food.

Four members of the Junior Leadership Team, in Years 5 and 6, volunteered to deliver the parcels to the foodbank and help to sort the food.

While there, pupils also got to ask questions and find out more about the service.

Michael Clark, head of school, said: "As a school, we are extremely proud of this group of children who are setting a great example to their peers.

"To have 15 boxes of food to donate shows the level of generosity from the Roydon community.

"We take great pride in being a part of the Roydon community and events like harvest festival show the power of the community coming together."

The school held its harvest festival service at St Peter's Church, in Roydon, where pupils sang, read poetry and said prayers, as well as displaying their art work.

Lisa reaches for the sky... then plunges 15,000ft through it!

A WOMAN has fulfilled one of her dreams by skydiving and raising £900 for a military charity in the process.

Lisa Dormer Wilson, 38, from Harlow, took the plunge at an airfield in Wiltshire after being inspired by meeting several homeless ex-servicemen.

She met the veterans when volunteering at a homeless shelter on Christmas Day, an event that she has attended for ten years.

Lisa said she had always had a soft spot for Help for Heroes, and, after speaking to several veterans, she decided to do something different to the norm.

Lisa during her skydive

The 38-year-old encouraged those with a similar passion for challenges to step into the unknown.

"Do something for yourself and create a life experience that you will treasure," she said. "But if you can, then do it for a fantastic cause. It is such a reward to help people.

"I will certainly do more like this, and more for Help for Heroes, but at this stage I don't know what. It will be hard to top this experience."

Lisa booked her skydiving at the last minute, but if you would like to enter an official Help for Heroes challenge, then visit: www.helpforheroes.com for more information.

Strictly Xtended – a clarification

IN last week's edition of the Harlow Star, we printed a report about Abigail Butler of Strictly Xtended being named best hair extensionist in Essex. In this story, which was provided to us by Jodie McCalla, it was incorrectly stated that Ms McCalla co-owned the business with Abigail Butler.

We would like to clarify that this is not the case and that Abigail Butler is the sole owner.

Hospice gives thanks to Children in Need for its newest service

CHILDREN in Need day formed part of St Clare Hospice's activities to mark the six-month anniversary of its Children and Young People's Bereavement Service.

St Clare's newest service which was launched following a major grant from BBC Children in Need.

The hospice charity, based in Hastingwood, officially launched the service in June and has supported more than 22 children, young people and their families since.

The specialist service, which is run by an integrative arts psychotherapist, provides a range of services to support the children, grandchildren and loved ones aged under 18 years, of those cared for by St Clare.

Catherine Kiff, St Clare's Children, young people and family therapist, outlined the service: "My role is to support all those children and young people who have been identified by our team, or who have been referred by their families, as requiring specialist psychological care following the death of a loved who has been cared for by St Clare.

"I run one-to-one counselling sessions with the child or young person, working creatively through the arts, which includes painting, drawing and collage, to help them to get in touch with the emotions and feelings that they find difficult to put into words.

"These sessions may take place in the Hospice itself, in the child or young person's school or college, or at a location in their community. Wherever and whenever is most appropriate for that young person."

Catherine continued: "I also support families with children in our Inpatient Unit at the Hospice, speaking to them about how to break difficult news to children and young people, such as the diagnosis of a life-limiting illness or how to tell a child that their family member or loved one won't be getting better.

St Clare Hospice's Patient and Family Support Team in Pudsey ears on Children in Need day

"I have also been delivering training to our own staff members within the organisation, so that the whole Hospice team is better prepared to help support children and young people going through what can be a very difficult time in their lives."

Outlining the difference that the Children in Need funding will make to the children and young people St Clare supports, Catherine said: "This major funding has enabled us to help the children and young people we work with to access and express their emotions and feelings; supporting them on their grieving journey and enabling them to talk about the death of their loved one.

"Losing your mum, dad or loved one as a child can affect you for the rest of your life, so it is vital that St Clare provides this support to complete the circle of care for the whole family."

Students raise funds to spread joy at Christmas

STUDENTS at Sir Charles Kao UTC joined together this term to participate in the Operation Christmas Child appeal.

Samaritan's Purse organises the appeal each year.

It asks people to produce a small shoe box of gifts to send to children in need throughout the world.

The fundraising event was led by the Sir Charles Kao UTC student senior leadership team. This involved a non-uniform day and cake sale. Through this they raised funds to send the shoe boxes and asked for donations of small gifts and toys to fill them.

The students raised £137 and sent 12 boxes to the appeal through all their efforts. Once they had collected everything, they worked together to pack all the gifts into suitable boxes and send them off to Samaritan's Purse.

Amber Read, deputy head girl said: "We are proud that we raised money to make a child's Christmas amazing. Thank you to everyone for their help."

Head of school Lisa Tooley said: "I am very proud of our students for organising this fundraising effort, which was an amazing achievement despite being a small school.

"Their hard work will pay dividends for young people throughout the world. We are incredibly pleased with how much hard work they put into the event"

Pupil Advocates are chosen to take on extra responsibilities

AFTER a tough selection process and an even more thorough interview procedure, Katherines Primary Academy would like to introduce their first Pupil Advocates.

The Pupil Advocates represent Katherines' Houses and hold positions of responsibility around the school.

During the school day the pupils work in the school office to support visitors, provide help over lunch times to class teachers and help younger children in their day to day tasks.

The children wear blazers so that they are easily recognised among their peers.

This year Daniel Robinson & Sons are celebrating 125 years' service to the community. They have been conducting funerals in and around Harlow since the New Town was built 70 years ago.

The business was founded in 1892 by Daniel Robinson. Daniel was a particularly able and far-sighted businessman and, within a relatively short time, he had bought a brickyard and land, followed by a builder's yard. Timber was readily available on his farmland and he built a saw mill to use the timber for building local properties and for producing coffins.

The business grew and developed and in 1966 it was evident that the flourishing New Town of Harlow would benefit from the building of a funeral home with the full services of a funeral director and monumental mason. A leasehold site at Wych Elm, Harlow, was acquired from Harlow Development Corporation, enabling the second branch of Daniel Robinson & Sons to open, this was the first purpose-designed funeral director's premises built in the area. In those days it was run by Fred Donaldson who lived and served the Harlow community for thirty years.

Wych Elm, Harlow, has changed considerably since the 1960's, as you can see below. Today their premises there provide excellent facilities for the families of Harlow, with everything on-site, including two Chapels of Rest and a dedicated, qualified team.

In this, their 125th Year, the Company is led by Managing Director Gary Neill who is proud of leading this family business and says, "this year we continue to review and improve everything we do, keeping our facilities and vehicles as up to date as possible to ensure the best level of service we can for the families we serve. I am very proud of our Company and of our achievements, my team and I look forward to continuing our 'tradition of care' in to the future".

FILM REVIEWS

With Damon Smith

ALSO OUT THIS WEEK

Julianne Moore and Matt Damon in Suburbicon

SUBURBICON (15) ★★☆☆☆

A BUNGLED home invasion in a pristine, picket-fenced 1950s American community provides the catalyst for George Clooney's darkly comic crime caper.

Based on a script by Oscar-winning siblings Joel and Ethan Coen, which has been gathering dust on a shelf for more than 30 years and arguably should have stayed there, Suburbicon addresses timely issues of racial politics and family disunity without drawing blood or compelling conclusions.

The two narrative strands of Clooney's film – bigotry and deceit – are awkwardly woven together into a tableau that can't decide whether it wants to satirise society or pass swingeing commentary on the thinly veiled ugliness behind the American dream.

As a thriller, the film telegraphs its cold-blooded intentions so far in advance, the only mystery is how the police, led by officer Hightower (Jack Conley), are blind to the skulduggery in a post-war paradise of manicured lawns, voluminous skirts and dutiful housewives.

Behind the camera, Clooney fails to enliven key sequences but he does elicit wry laughter with quirky details like Matt Damon's bloodied and bruised husband furiously peddling away from a flame-scorched crime scene on a child's bicycle.

The year is 1957 and family man Gardner Lodge (Damon), his wife Rose (Julianne Moore) and their son Nicky (Noah Jupe) are among 60,000 all-white residents of the picture perfect enclave of Suburbicon.

During a visit by Rose's twin sister Margaret (Moore again), the family is surprised by two brutish intruders, Ira Sloan (Glenn Fleshler) and his sidekick Louis (Alex Hassell).

"There are men in the house. They are going to take what they want and leave," Gardner coolly explains to his terrified boy.

Alas, Rose dies from inhaling too much chloroform and the Lodge clan huddles together in a time of grief, rejecting help from Rose's concerned brother Mitch (Gary Basarba).

Margaret becomes a surrogate mother to Nicky and dyes her hair blonde to spookily resemble her late sibling.

Soon after, life insurance claims investigator Bud Cooper (Oscar Isaac) arrives at the front door, armed with uncomfortable questions about the fortuitous timing of Rose's demise.

Gardner's calm facade warps and he takes a firm hand with Nicky: "This is a family matter and I don't want you talking to Uncle Mitch about it!"

Meanwhile, the streets of Suburbicon are filled with rage and dissent at the arrival of an African American family in the house next to the Lodges.

Suburbicon is a predictable tale of crime and punishment, which oozes period style but lacks suspense and a satisfying pay-off.

The fingerprints of the Coen brothers are unmistakably all over the script, which fails to test the mettle of an award-winning cast.

However, Jupe is compelling as the one of the few innocents, embroiled in the misfiring mayhem.

HOW TO COURT CONTROVERSY

Emma Stone as Billie Jean King and Steve Carell as Bobby Riggs

BATTLE OF THE SEXES (12A) ★★★★★

On a tennis court, love is all around before the first service point. Husband and wife directors Jonathan Dayton and Valerie Faris, who made an auspicious debut in 2006 with Little Miss Sunshine, serve-and-volley a fine romance in their dramatisation of the televised 1973 match between Billie Jean King and Bobby Riggs, which was billed as a showdown of youth versus experience as much as a battle of the sexes.

Or as Riggs pithily summarises the rivalry in the film: "Male chauvinistic pig versus hairy-legged feminist, no offence."

Scriptwriter Simon Beaufoy, who previously penned The Full Monty and Slumdog Millionaire, elegantly navigates the personal lives of the two protagonists as he explores gender inequalities and sexual identity in the run up to the winner-takes-all contest at the Houston Astrodome in Texas.

The fractious face-off provides the film with a gripping conclusion, even if you know the eventual outcome, executed with pinpoint precision and slick digital effects.

It's a sophisticated, crowd-pleasing rally of heartache and triumph against adversity, underpinned by a universal messages of acceptance and respect.

Game, set and match Dayton and Faris.

Billie Jean (Emma Stone) and her ballsy manager Gladys Heldman (Sarah Silverman) are enraged when Jack Kramer (Bill Pullman), one of the founders of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP), announces the prize money for a forthcoming tournament, which is heavily weighted in favour of the male players.

"They're faster, stronger and more competitive. It's just biology," argues Kramer.

In retaliation, King spearheads the creation of the Women's Tennis Association (WTA), including her fiercest rival, Margaret Court (Jessica McNamee).

The women-only tour gains in popularity and during one layover, Billie Jean meets hairdresser Marilyn Barnett (Andrea Riseborough).

The spark of attraction is palpable, even though Billie Jean has an adoring husband, Larry King (Austin Stowell).

As Billie Jean agonises with her forbidden desires, former champion Bobby Riggs (Steve Carell), now past his prime, issues a bold challenge to any female player to face him on the court.

"I'm going to put the show back in chauvinism!" he proudly declares.

Battle Of The Sexes demonstrates a deft touch in lobbing moments of gentle humour into the characters' emotional upheaval.

Oscar winner Stone turns in a rich and affecting performance that trumps her excellent work in La La Land as the ladies' standard bearer, who tumbles head over heels in love during preparations for the grudge match.

Carell portrays her opponent as a media-savvy showman and buffoon, who is weighed down by the expectations of an establishment that believes, "people pay to see the men play. They're more of a draw".

When the tears of his clown start to fall, we're suitably moved.

The 2017 line-up of UK Subs with Charlie Harper second from the right

LOOKING FORWARD

Punk originals UK Subs play Southend this Friday but frontman Charlie Harper tells Martin Neal that he's not one for living in the past

They pogoed their way to prominence on the first wave of punk rock and 40 years later the UK Subs are banging out blisteringly raucous songs at packed out gigs.

But make no mistake – this is no bunch of old boys living off past glories and taking a nostalgic, safety pin-covered meander down Memory Lane.

Frontman Charlie Harper is 73 years young and retains a burning desire to keep things fresh, vibrant and relevant. In fact he's already taking with boyish enthusiasm about what we can expect as the band enters its fifth decade.

Catchy punk classics such as Stranglehold, Warhead, Tomorrow's Girls, Party In Paris and Teenage put the Subs on the map in the late 70s and early 80s but they've continued to perform and record regularly since, famously naming their albums with consecutive letters of the alphabet.

Their most recent offering, Ziezo, was announced as their final studio LP – they'd reached Z so it seemed apt – but they're not finished yet and there's more to come after all.

"Cleopatra (an American independent label) want us to put out a covers album," revealed Charlie. "It's all there – we've done covers throughout our career so it's money for old rope."

"There'll be some Iggy, some MC5, some Jonathan Richman – all old stuff we used to play."

"When me and Nicky (Garraff) first started the band we only had six songs, so we had to throw some covers in."

Unsurprisingly Charlie is regularly asked about his incredible 40 years at the front of the band and whether he still expected to be punking it up after all these years.

But he says: "When you're constantly writing new material, you're living in the future, not the past. I don't think about the past – I go from day to day and that is it."

"A long time ago, when I was about 45, I thought I was getting too old to be doing this but we make a conscious effort to improve everything we do. We hit on our weak spots and work on making them stronger."

"Every detail is worked on – we don't stand still. This is not a nostalgia trip."

The Subs, who play Chinnerys in Southend on

"I don't think about the past, I go from day to day and that is it. This is not a nostalgia trip"

Charlie Harper

Friday, have redefined the meaning of 'a lot' by making a lot of line-up changes over the years but, save for swapping guitarist Jet for Steve Straughan last year, they've had a consistent line-up for well over a decade now, with bassist Alvin Gibbs and drummer Jamie Oliver making up the quartet.

And it's clear that harmony in the camp is key factor in both band's longevity and the lengthy list of comings and goings.

"Back in 1980 we supported the Ramones," recalled Charlie as an example of precisely what he didn't want in his band, "and two of them, I forget which ones, wouldn't talk to the others. One of them had to act as a go between!"

There's none of that with the Subs and although they have 40 years in the business behind them, exciting times are ahead.

"We won't say '40 years, now we're going to do something completely different'," explained Charlie, "but we will sound a little bit different in the future after we've done the covers album."

"We'll take more time and release one single a year rather than an album and give out some quality. We're always looking to do something better and put ourselves out there."

■ UK Subs play Chinnerys, Southend, on Friday, November 24 with support from The Blue Carpet Band and Loaded 44. Tickets available from www.seetickets.co.uk

GIG GUIDE

GIG OF THE WEEK

■ The Jar Family, The Bassment, Chelmsford, Saturday, November 25 The Jar Family are not a family but a group of five musicians who named themselves after the donations jar they use to pass round at their early gigs. A close-knit bunch, they've developed their own distinctive sound known as industrial folk and have built up a following by supporting the likes of Jake Bugg, Babyshambles and Alabama 3. Check them out at this Blues & Roots In The City night where Sheri Kershaw and her band will be special guests. Doors open at 7.45pm.

■ The Human League, Cliffs Pavilion, Southend, Wednesday, November 21, 2018 It's a year away but you can book your tickets now to see synth-pop pioneers The Human League at Southend. Award-winning radio presenter and writer Danny Baker talks to HANNAH STEPHENSON about his battle with cancer, his spat with BBC execs and why he thinks radio won't touch him now

DANNY BAKER chuckles in the knowledge that he's just been voted 15th in a poll of Britain's greatest radio hosts – ahead of Chris Evans, Tony Blackburn and Paul Gambaccini.

These days he only does a two-hour Saturday show on BBC Radio 5 live, and says he's as happy sorting out his 12,000-strong album collection as he is being on air.

It's a far cry from 2012, when his BBC Radio London show was axed and he proceeded to have a prolonged rant about it on his last show, describing his superiors as 'pinhead weasels' (and, off-air, gave the executives who made the decision a piece of his mind).

The whole debacle is featured in his third autobiography, Going On The Turn, following on from his previous witty memoirs Going To Sea In A Sieve and Going Off Alarming. And while his trademark humour abounds in this section of the book, it seems he's laughing about some of it through gritted teeth.

"The same week I was inducted into the Radio Hall of Fame, I was let go by local radio," he recalls. "But the people who run all the media in this country want to have issues to talk about. They don't put any weight by entertainment. My radio show was nothing but absolute froth, brilliantly delivered, but they didn't understand it."

By his own admission, Danny, 60, prefers to do things spontaneously, to turn up 10 minutes before a show and let it run its course, rather than be bound by planning meetings run by producers.

"The erroneous reputation I've got is someone who is a little bit edgy and dangerous, and that's absolutely not true at all. Anyone who listens to my show knows the sausage sandwich game and the calls about who your mother secretly fancied."

"If I don't do that two-hour show on a Saturday morning, I'm not in radio at all. Radio won't touch me with a bargepole."

"All they want is something they can control and say, 'Shouldn't we go out there and talk about gangs and drugs and Brexit?' It's like John Peel. They shunted him off into the middle of the night, he dies, and then they name a building after him. It's absolutely absurd."

While there's endless humour in Going On The Turn, as Danny recounts stories about his escapades on TFI Friday with Chris Evans, stalking John Cleese and entertaining David Bowie, the dark cloud of cancer descends half way through.

He pulls no punches when describing what he endured after being diagnosed with head and neck cancer in 2010, yet it's clear he's not one for misery memoirs. "It's not my style to look down, not up. I don't find other people's troubles, worries

Cancer hasn't changed the way I live life

and illnesses fascinating."

So he's matter-of-fact about the treatment he needed, including chemotherapy and radiotherapy (he had to be fitted with a mask which was bolted down to the theatre table during the radiotherapy sessions).

Parts of his throat and tonsils were removed and, during the treatment, the inside of his mouth became one enormous painful blister, while the skin on his neck peeled off.

For months, he was unable to eat or drink, and had to be fitted with a tube via a hole into his stomach for feeding and administering morphine.

"I never Googled it, I never asked any questions," he says, "because that's the only thing you can do. You've got no control over it. There's nothing you can do. It was a straight fight and I was the battleground. Cancer versus science – you just have to let it happen."

"It's so much more awful than you can possibly imagine. You don't have time to be scared. It's a useless response. It's horrendous, but here we are now. Treat it like a roundabout, drive straight on."

Despite the grim situation, there's always humour in the book. He makes light of the fact Chris Evans and Jonathan Ross, who he says don't get on, visited him in hospital at the same time, sitting opposite each other on each side of the bed, making happy conversation.

"It was fine," he says, chuckling. "I'm the sort of person who would have said, 'Well this ain't awkward, is it?' They both teased each other at the time but I don't think they've seen each other since."

The treatment lasted eight months, although he says it took him four years to recover. The latest book "wasn't difficult to write," he says. "I wanted to let people know what it's like. 'That gruesome, awful process tells you what to expect from it.'"

Although candid in the book, Danny says he has "no idea" how his wife Wendy and their three children – Bonnie, Sonny and Mance – coped, Danny exclaims: "I have no idea! The first time my wife knew how I felt was when she read the book. She said, 'Oh blimey, it's strong in parts, isn't it?'"

Until a year ago, Danny still couldn't eat properly, and his sense of taste is still diminished. He also suffers from tinnitus and pins and needles in his toes and feet.

"But you tell them [the doctors] on your last visit and they shrug. 'Oh, you've got tinnitus, but so what? You're alive!'"

Cancer hasn't changed him, he says. "I've learned no lessons and I'm not a better person. It hasn't changed the way I live my life. It hasn't changed my personality."

At 60, he feels he's entered his third act: "I want to be living terrifically well. I want people to say, 'Oh, whatever happened to him?' 'Oh, he's got a place on the ocean and writes kids' books. We were going to move to the States, but I think we'll get a place in Portugal instead."

"We go to lunch every day, or do nothing. I'm never bored. I'm sitting here re-filing loads of records – that will do me for now."

A GALAXY OF HER OWN: AMAZING STORIES OF WOMEN IN SPACE by Libby Jackson, Century, £16.99 (ebook £9.99)

A GALAXY Of Her Own tells how women have contributed to advance scientific knowledge – from mathematicians Ada Lovelace and Katherine Johnson, to geologist Frances Westall, aerospace engineer Anita Sengupta and expert seamstresses Ellie Foraker, Madeleine Ivory, Bert Pilkenton and Cecil Webb, who designed and made the suits the astronauts wore for lunar missions.

Author Libby Jackson, who is an astronaut flight programme manager for the UK space agency, writes: "The women, regardless of the period they were living in, refused to be limited by any barriers that society tried to place upon them."

SING, UNBURIED, SING by Jesmyn Ward, Bloomsbury, £16.99 (ebook £8.99)

Jesmyn Ward's third novel follows a journey made by a black mother, Leonie, with her family, to visit the prison where her children's white father, Michael, is about to be released.

Themes of drug addiction and child abuse feature in this powerful tale, with ghostly figures from the past returning to admonish Leonie for the choices she has made in her life. The civil liberty struggles faced by many Americans today, and the country's controversial history, are reflected in Ward's deeply affecting prose.

MYTHOS: THE GREEK MYTHS RETOLD by Stephen Fry, Michael Joseph, £20 (ebook £9.99)

Fry's lively writing conveys his enthusiasm for Greek myths as he regales us with tales of petulant, selfish gods, bitter family feuds, lust, sex and extreme violence. It's a rollicking good read.

Fry says readers don't need to know anything before they tackle Mythos and he hopes to introduce to new people the stories which have enthralled him.

PRIMO PIATTO

INGREDIENTS (Serves 4)

400g '00' grade pasta flour, plus extra for dusting; ½ tsp fine salt; 2 tsp very finely ground black pepper; 2 egg yolks; 3 medium eggs, lightly beaten; 230ml extra virgin olive oil; 8 large (or 16 medium) fresh sage leaves; ½ tsp grated lemon zest, to serve

For the filling: 750g ricotta cheese; grated zest of 2 unwaxed lemons; 250g cooked king prawns, peeled and finely chopped; 3tbsp chopped fresh chives; 2 medium eggs, lightly beaten; salt

METHOD:

1. For the dough: place the flour, salt and pepper in a large bowl. Make a well in the centre and add the egg yolks, beaten eggs and two tablespoons of oil. Using the handle of a wooden spoon, gradually mix. Once crumbly, turn onto a well-floured surface.

2. Knead for eight to 10 minutes until soft and smooth. As with bread: hold the dough in one hand, fold, push down and stretch the dough away from you with the other hand. Rotate and repeat. Shape into a ball, wrap in cling film and chill for 30 minutes.

3. Mix the ricotta, lemon zest, prawns and chives in a bowl. Cover with cling film and refrigerate for at least 15 minutes.

4. Unwrap the dough, dust it lightly with flour and cut into two even-sized pieces. Roll out each to about 2mm thick, either using a pasta machine or a rolling pin. Dust frequently with flour or the dough can become sticky.

5. Lay one piece of dough on a well-dusted work surface. Place a tablespoonful of the filling at 5cm intervals over half the sheet only. Lightly brush the spaces around the filling with the beaten egg. Fold over the dough to cover the filling. Press gently around each spoonful of filling to expel the air. Using a 5.5cm round ravioli stamp cutter, cut out the ravioli. Cover with a tea towel and repeat with the other piece of dough.

6. Cook the ravioli in a large pan of boiling, salted water for three minutes. Meanwhile, heat the remaining oil in a large frying pan over a medium heat. Add the sage. As soon as it starts to sizzle, transfer the ravioli using a slotted spoon to the pan with the sage. Gently toss to coat. To serve, sprinkle with a little lemon zest

My grandfather taught me to keep food simple

CHARISMATIC TV chef and restaurateur, Gino D'Acampo, reveals that he emulated one of his food heroes for his latest TV show.

"One of my favourite chefs is [the late] Keith Floyd," he explains. "We did a few cooking shows together. For me, Keith Floyd's shows are what I do now when I go to Italy."

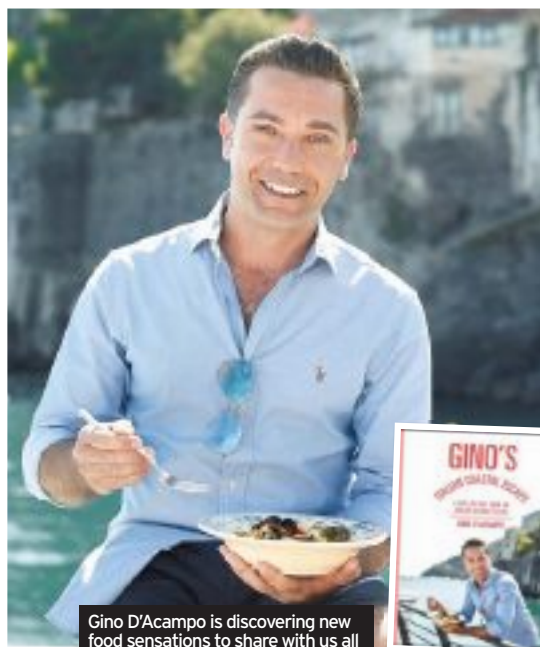

"When I'm doing Gino's Italian Escape, I always have him in mind. I go round the region, finding an ingredient, meeting the local people, then I build my kitchen and I start to cook."

Gino, 41, originally from Torre del Greco, Naples, has travelled along "the most famous coast in Europe", discovering the local specialities and authentic ingredients associated with Italy's west coast for his ITV show and accompanying cookbook.

The book takes influence from kitchens in Rome, Tuscany, the Amalfi Coast, and the islands of Sicily and Elba. It's not just about eating well either, Gino also believes he has "a responsibility to make sure people understand where their ingredients come from", which actually led to him uncovering a few culinary surprises. "You would never associate liquorice with Italian food," says Gino, who discovered a taste for Calabrian liquorice while researching the book. "The more I travel, I always learn something new and exciting."

One of his favourite dishes he

Gino D'Acampo is discovering new food sensations to share with us all stumbled upon, and adapted, is ndunderi (pronounced 'dune-der-ee'), which he found while exploring the Amalfi Coast. "It's like gnocchi but instead of potato, they use ricotta. This is another thing which I had no idea they did," he explains. "It's so delicate, light and beautiful. Delicious!"

The chef believes overcomplicating is what most people get wrong when attempting to cook Italian food. "The most important thing my grandfather taught me, when I was a little boy, was that Italian food must be kept simple."

Spend more time getting the right ingredients and less time in the kitchen – this is the secret."

From his grandfather's influence, to his parents' recipes in the new cookbook (including his mother's meatballs), it's clear family is very important. He hopes to pass on his love of cooking to his three children. His eldest, Luciano, is already "a huge foodie – he spends all his pocket money in restaurants and he's got a great understanding of food."

Gino and his family spend half the year at his Italian home in Sardinia, and the other six months in England. He hopes his next journey will take him to the Adriatic Coast, "the coast that goes from Venice to Puglia that is not as well-known as Amalfi, but is just as amazing."

He says: "My kitchen is wherever I am, it could be on the beach, it could be on top of the mountain, or in somebody's house. That's the style of cooking I like."

INGREDIENTS
(Serves 4)

Olive oil for greasing
400g minced pork
400g minced beef
150g fresh white breadcrumbs
2 garlic cloves, peeled and crushed
5tbsp chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley
100g freshly grated Grana Padano cheese
2 medium eggs, lightly beaten
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
For the sauce:
2 x 400g tins of chopped tomatoes
690ml jar of passata (sieved tomatoes)
4tbsp extra virgin olive oil
½tsp dried chilli flakes
10 fresh basil leaves, plus extra to garnish
Salt to season

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 220°C/gas mark 7. Oil a large baking sheet and set aside. Place the pork, beef, breadcrumbs, garlic, parsley, Grana Padano and eggs in a bowl. Season with salt and pepper. Mix with your hands until everything is thoroughly combined.

2. Using dampened hands, take small amounts of the meat mixture and roll into 12 equal-sized balls. Place on the baking sheet. Bake for 12 minutes.

3. For the sauce: Put the tomatoes, passata and oil in a saucepan over a medium heat. Stir in the chilli flakes, basil and some salt. Bring to the boil. Reduce the heat, partially cover the pan and simmer for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

4. Carefully place the meatballs in the tomato sauce and partially cover the pan again. Simmer for 30 minutes, turning occasionally. If the sauce gets too thick, add a little hot water. Scatter over a few basil leaves and serve with plenty of warm crusty bread to mop up all the sauce.

SECONDO

MEATBALLS*INGREDIENTS
(Serves 6)

200g ripe strawberries, hulled and sliced
140ml limoncello (lemon-flavoured liqueur)
80g caster sugar
6 egg yolks
Grated zest of 1 unwaxed lemon, plus extra for decoration
120ml double cream

METHOD

1. Put the strawberries in a medium bowl with four tablespoons of the limoncello and two tablespoons of the sugar. Stir and set aside at room temperature for an hour, stirring every 10 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, place the egg yolks in a heatproof bowl (preferably stainless steel) with the lemon zest and remaining sugar. Whisk using a balloon whisk until pale and creamy.

3. Set the bowl over a pan of very gently simmering water. The base of the bowl should not touch the water. Add the remaining limoncello and whisk constantly until the mixture foams and thickens. This should take about five minutes; remember, the mixture will thicken further as it cools.

4. Fill a slightly larger bowl with iced water and set the bowl with the zabaione mixture inside it. Leave to cool completely, stirring occasionally (it should take about 25 minutes).

5. Put the cream in a medium bowl and whip until thick enough to form peaks. Gently fold a quarter of the cream into the cooled zabaione, then the remainder.

6. To serve, divide the strawberries and their juices among six dessert glasses and top with a large dollop of zabaione. Sprinkle over some grated lemon zest. Serve immediately.

SPOTLIGHT

Mel would be looking down at me, thinking 'You b**tard'. We talked about going on the road for years

Griff Rhys Jones will be touring in the new year

Comedian Griff Rhys Jones chats to MARION McMULLEN about the joys and perils of travel

What was the starting point for your forthcoming tour Where Was I?

IT IS going through my own experience from the last 15 years. I've sailed a boat to St Petersburg and around the Med, travelled to Morocco, the Galapagos, India and Australia and made TV series like Greatest Cities, A Slow Train To Africa and Three Men In A Boat.

It's about what sort of travel I enjoy, travel in general and how television travel series changed me from being a stay-at-home guy... also how I attracted ladies of a certain age fan club along the way.

What have you found yourself doing for the TV shows?

(LAUGHS) I've been pushed into all kinds of things. 'Can you jump off a bridge? Abseil down a waterfall?'

I do say no sometimes. I say 'Look, I'm in my sixties. I can't do everything a 24-year-old can do'. But there are experiences I have done for television which I never would have had the chance to do otherwise.

What's the most dangerous thing you've done?

IT'S always those things you do not even know are dangerous and it's only later you think: 'Why on earth did I do that?'

I went with a TV crew to Badu Island in Australia to meet the high priest of the island at the sacred lake to feed the sacred crocodile. He was throwing bits of meat in, but the crocodile would not come. The guy was then called away and handed me the bag of meat.

The producer said 'We must get this crocodile' and I didn't even think about it. I went right to the edge of the water and started dangling the meat.

Everyone screamed at me afterwards 'What were you doing that for? It's crazy.' But I didn't realise how dangerous it was at the time.

Any other memorable experiences?

I DO joke about it now - walking through the sewers of Manchester effluence. It was very smelly and I was with a team dealing with the Manchester fatberg.

The producer even said at one point: 'Can you look a bit more enthusiastic?' I then fell headfirst into the sewer, into the water. It happens to me a lot, but I've never injured myself.

Have there been any close shaves?

I WENT on a trip to the Galapagos one time with a group of friends and when I was there to my astonishment the boat burst into flames and we had to swim for it.

I was lying in the water waiting to be rescued, looking back at the boat, and I thought 'I'm in mortal danger - where is my camera crew? I'm all alone.' This was all happening and there was not a camera in sight.

So how are your language skills? (CHUCKLES) Italian is a language that I think I can speak. I make it up with a bit of French and Spanish and I know a few Italian words and I can do all the Italian gestures.

I will blunder in with the two or three words I know and it does get me into trouble. People reply and I have no idea what they are talking about. The price of sheep? I don't know.

I remember a bicycle holiday with the kids. I went to a bread shop trying to buy bread for a picnic. There was a big line of old ladies all looking like Les Dawsons and I pointed at the bread, 'questo?', and the woman looked at me and just said 'No'.

There was nothing I could do to make her sell my any bread. I was miming eating bread, pointing and everything. They eventually sent for a priest and he only was fluent in only two English words - 'B*gger off'. (Laughs) I've never to this day any idea why I was not allowed to buy bread.

Do you have a jet lag cure?

THERE is no cure. I've travelled first class ... once. I went to Australia for an advertising campaign. I was only standing in for Spike Milligan, it was a long time ago, and it was an advert for breakfast cereal.

They booked me into first class and I spent a lot of time looking at the other first class passengers trying to figure out who was paying for their tickets.

I arrived in Australia and they gave me a day off to recover from jet lag, but they shouldn't have done that. Jet lag does not hit you the first day but the second day. I was falling asleep on my feet the second day. It was embarrassing.

What do you always pack?

I RUN. I've run in Nairobi, across Red Square and various locations in the south of France.

You can run around Sydney Opera House as well and under the bridge. Running takes up space with shoes and all that stuff, but I pack my running kit when I can. I regularly leave behind phone chargers, wash bags and articles of clothing.

What do you think your late comedy partner Mel Smith would think about you now touring?

(LAUGHS) Mel would be looking down at me thinking 'You b**tard.' We talked about going on the road for years or doing something like The Odd Couple but in the end we just never got around to it.

SOUND OUT

UB

Robin Campbell, second from left in blue shirt, with the current UB40 line-up

Fans can't help falling in love with UB40, but Robin Campbell tells MARION McMULLEN he nearly turned down the reggae band that has become an international favourite

UB40 star Robin Campbell walked away and nearly called it a day the first time the top reggae group came together to play.

"It was like any new band," he chuckles, "a cacophony of horrendous noise when we first started out. We had been talking about it for a few years when we were kids growing up and then we decided it was time to bite the bullet and do it."

"It was a funny day. Most of the band couldn't play anything. We treated it like a job five days a week and knuckled down to learn. But when we first got together I just walked away."

"The first session, I just said 'It's never going to happen is it? I'll see you' and I went to the pub and just disappeared. I walked away for a few months, but James (Brown), Earl (Falconer) and my brother Ali practised away in a cellar and then came to see me. They said they were making something that sounded like music and to come and listen. I went along with my brother Duncan and listening to them encouraged me to say 'yes' and that was it. I was back in."

He laughs: "Duncan thought said 'It's not going to happen, is it?' and left then because he had other things to do."

The Birmingham band, who made their mark with hits like Red Red Wine, One In Ten, Rat In Mi Kitchen and Falling In Love With You, celebrate their 40th anniversary next year and named themselves after the unemployment benefit form.

They have had more than 40 UK top 40 hits singles and achieved sales of more than 100 million records – making UB40 one of the most successful British groups of all time.

"The band was always the dream, but it took a while," says Robin, "and then very quickly we were making records and writing our own songs, although it was writing by osmosis, jamming together, because we could not write music."

"It all happened so quickly for us. We had a year of little gigs in pubs and small clubs and stuff just going around creating a buzz and then we did a few shows in London."

"Chrissie Hynde was told about us playing in London. It was our first London show and she came to see us and then came backstage and said 'I want you to come on my tour.' And that was it. We went from playing clubs to sell-out shows in front of several thousand a night."

"Chrissie had a number one album at the time and a number one single out and it suddenly blew our audience up to maximum. It was a milestone and it made us realise 'yep, this is working.'"

It took the band three years though to have a number one hit, but then they brought out their Labour Of Love album and the single Red Red Wine.

"Everything changed again," Robin chuckles, "we stepped up another gear and just kept going. It was a juggernaut that we couldn't stop. We actually spent lot of time trying to play it down. We didn't want to be just flavour of the month so we tried to keep out of the limelight."

"We wanted this to be a career, to have some longevity, not to be just this year thing and never heard of again – as happens to so many bands. We wanted to last for years."

He adds: "We thought it would last 10 years and it's now nearly 40 years. We're not going to stop now. We're going to keep on doing this forever. I can't imagine doing anything else."

The band in 1985 (behind keyboard), Astro, Norman Hassan, Jimmy Brown, Earl Falconer, Ali Campbell – who left in 2008 –, and (in front of keyboard) Mickey Virtue, Robin Campbell and Brian Travers

Ali Campbell left the band in 2008 and another Campbell brother, Duncan replaced him and they embark on a major 14-date UK Cities And Town tour next month, including a UB40 hometown concert at Birmingham's Genting Arena.

"We never stop really touring and we played India this year as well," says Robin. "It was our first proper tour there. We had done one-off shows there and 20 years ago did a Bollywood awards in front of a live TV audience of millions."

"I always wanted to go back and we met this promoter who was prepared to do it. We did four or five shows and it went so well they want us back next year and now several promoters are fighting over us."

Robin Campbell on stage in 1989

Robin laughingly admits the deadline for the new album was a year ago, but says touring means finding time to get into the studio has been a challenge.

"We spend so much time on the road and there is not an awful lot of downtime. We've done all the recording, we just have to finish it now. We're bringing it out on Pledge Music, like a lot of people now, and for at least a year we've just kept apologising to our fans. It's coming though... we'll just decide on a title at the 11th hour."

A new generation of music fans are now discovering UB40 as well. "We're not really played on young people's radio any more, but we get these kids on the front row at concerts and they know all the words. Most of them weren't even born when half the records came out," says Robin in amazement.

"It's re-energising and absolutely brilliant. We get our energy from the audience. It's a drug you can't get any other way. The feedback from the audience is like nothing else and audiences all over the world want to do the same thing – sing and dance and have a party."

Robin, who turns 63 on Christmas Day, adds with a laugh: "We are old codgers out on the road. I love gigging. We get three or four generations coming along to concerts, grandparents and even great grandparents, and half the band are grandparents themselves."

"Concerts are great... it just takes longer to recover afterwards these days."

TOKIO MYERS

FROM delicate piano constructs so fragile they barely hold together, to full-on electronic sculptures, Britain's Got Talent champion Tokio Myers' performance is consistently astounding. The vocals, where used, complement the sound without taking over, leaving the music itself to shine through.

The title track comes over as a contemporary classical piece after the manner of Gorecki, with its ebb and flow of mixed instrumentation and voice. The single Bloodstream, on the other hand, shows his grasp of pop sensibilities.

This album is just the start of what will, in all likelihood, be a stellar career. Tokio Myers is here and now.

PALOMA FAITH

ONE of the most recognisable voices in modern pop music has something to say, and Paloma Faith is saying it loudly from her soapbox, backed with her trademark retro soul meets disco style, complete with goosebump-inducing gospel.

Here she tackles meaty topics such as the Brexit vote, the refugee crisis and the inequality of wealth.

Title track The Architect is one heck of an opening statement, complete with a Samuel L Jackson narration, and I'll Be Gentle, featuring John Legend, is truly beautiful, their voices working in joyous harmony together.

Warrior, with Sia, is another standout on an album of punchy tracks that'll get your heart pounding.

MORRISSEY
LOW IN HIGH SCHOOL

THE son of rainy Manchester sticks to a handful of treasured themes: anti-establishment rallying in Who Will Protect Us From The Police?, the customary seven-minute middle-album meander through his mind with I Bury The Living, and the power to provoke with Israel.

The record also showcases his potential to surprise – All The Young People Must Fall In Love comes like a bolt from the blue, a rousing and uplifting Lou Reed-esque cut, complete with bar-room piano.

On Low In High School, he acknowledges both his past and post-"exit" future. Impressive.

CELEBRITY WELLBEING

Jonnie Peacock triumphed over disability to become a gold medal-winning Paralympic athlete. He tells GABRIELLE FAGAN why competing in TV's biggest dance competition was just as scary

ATHLETE Jonnie Peacock is best known as a double Paralympic, world and European T44 100m champion. He's also the first person with a disability to take part in BBC's Strictly Come Dancing.

He lost his leg after contracting meningitis aged five but, at 19, became a household name after winning gold in the 100m sprint at the 2012 London Paralympics. In 2013 Jonnie was awarded an MBE for his services to athletics and won a further gold medal at Rio 2016.

After the 24-year-old from Cambridge was voted off Strictly at the weekend, he reveals more about the physical challenges of ballroom dancing...

What was it like taking part in Strictly Come Dancing?

"THE first time I stepped on the dance floor, it was really worrying, nerve-racking and stressful. I assumed I'd be falling all over the place, but I was actually better than I expected.

"I'd always shied away from dancing; my limit was a few bad moves after drinks on a night out.

"I realised that (Strictly) is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity, and that I'd get the chance to learn so much about dancing, as well as have fun. (The competition) is all about pushing myself out of the comfortable box of athletics, where I'm confident of my abilities. I was stepping into the unknown.

"It was also a brilliant opportunity to change perceptions of what people think a disabled or amputee person can do."

What was your worst Strictly nightmare?

"I HAD a few dreams where I stepped on the floor, my mind went completely blank and I couldn't remember the routine.

"It nearly happened with the quickstep, as I really struggled to remember the individual blocks of the routine from my training (the dances are broken down into sections to make it easier to learn). But thankfully, I pulled it off.

"My real boost came after I wore trousers to perform the waltz, and Anton (Du Beke) said he couldn't tell which was my amputee leg. That was a really awesome comment to get, because he's a professional with 15 years on the show.

"Wearing my running blade the following week was also great. I got such a positive response from people."

One proud Peacock

Jonnie celebrates winning gold during the Men's 100m - T44 final at the 2016 Rio Paralympic Games and with Strictly host Tess Daly and his dance partner, Oti Mabuse, below

Did you get on well with your dance partner, Oti Mabuse?

"WHEN we first started rehearsals, we had such a good laugh together and we immediately hit it off.

"We share the same sense of humour and have been laughing ever since. She's a great person who pushes me hard, but really looks after me and creates clever choreography to help me to perform at my best. She's given me so much confidence."

How do you look after your health and wellbeing?

"ONE of the best things I learned from one of my coaches is to listen to my body - because it always gives warning signs, such as tiredness or nagging ailments.

"I have a cold shower every morning which raises testosterone levels, boosts immunity and really pushes the reset button.

"For breakfast I have a smoothie packed with six vegetables, juice or coconut water, a super food like acai berries and a vitamin-enriched Maca powder.

"At night I soak for an hour in a bath filled with Epsom salts because the magnesium in it acts as a muscle relaxant and helps me to sleep better. I aim for around eight to 10 hours of sleep per night."

You're dating Northern Irish Paralympic sprinter, Sally Brown. Will you pop the question soon?

"I'M NOT a person to jump into something when I'm not ready and I don't want to put any pressure on us. I'm very happy though; I've known her for about seven years and we've dated for nearly four.

"I took a shine to her because she's such a nice girl - very sweet but with a bit of fire hidden away in her too.

"She's been incredibly supportive and understanding about Strictly. We were hardly spending any time together because I was so busy on the show."

How important has your family been in your success?

"THEY'VE been at the heart of it. Both my mum and dad have been so supportive - they've never questioned my decisions or doubted that I could do things.

"I don't really have any memories of losing my leg but my parents do. It was far worse for them really.

"I was always sports mad and they did everything they could to give me the same opportunities as everyone else.

"I was bullied at secondary school as I was different, but they were always there for me."

What's your athletics training regime?

"I DO four to six hours a day (around 40 hours a week) which culminates in about 10 seconds worth of work when I compete.

"It's high-intensity training in the gym and on the track. Sprinting is all about quick bursts of speed.

"I describe my job as 'the best in the world' because I get to do something that I love.

"Most people lose weight on Strictly because of the intense training, but I've actually put on weight! Although we trained for eight hours a day, it wasn't so fast-paced as my sports training - so I was actually struggling to stay in shape."

1 RED cabbage is low in calories and high in insoluble fibre. This type of fibre can help prevent constipation and helps relieve some gastrointestinal conditions, such as irritable bowel syndrome.

2 IT CONTAINS vitamin C, a powerful antioxidant which your body needs to make collagen, a connective tissue that gives structure, strength and support to muscles, skin, bones and other tissues throughout the body. Collagen is also essential for the process of healing wounds.

3 THE vegetable also contains vitamin A which is essential to healthy eyes and vision. Beta-carotene is converted by the body into the form of vitamin A called retinol that's used by cells in the eyes that detect light and convert it into nerve impulses.

4 RED cabbage is also rich in vitamin K. Long-term vitamin K deficiency increases the risk of developing osteoporosis, atherosclerosis and cancer, according to research published in the April 2012 issue of Food and Nutrition Research.

5 IT BELONGS to the cruciferous, or Brassica, family that includes broccoli, turnips and Brussels sprouts. Cruciferous vegetables are the only source of sulphur-containing compounds called glucosinolates that help reduce inflammation and fight bacteria.

DOCTOR'S NOTES

■ GRANDPARENTS who give kids treats or smoke in front of them may ruin their health - but parents say they feel unable to intervene because they rely on them for childcare, University of Glasgow researchers found.

■ DRINKING three to five cups of coffee a day can slash the risk of liver disease by 40%, research claims. Compared to non-coffee drinkers it also cut the chance of cirrhosis by up to 70%. American and Italian studies found caffeine, coffee oils, kahweol, cafestol and antioxidants protect the organ.

Jonnie and fellow Paralympian Ellie Simmonds surprise a primary school in Sheffield, providing them with new sporting equipment as part of Sainsbury's Active Kids Campaign

HOT HOUSE

MAKE YOUR HOME IN MALKIN DRIVE

This fantastic four-bedroom property, which is located in the new Church Langley development in Harlow, is currently on the market. The generous family home offers a comfortable amount of living space over two floors and is listed for just £380,000 with Reyland Johnson.

A very modern and impressive frontage fits in perfectly with the new build design that you'd expect on the development, which is located on Malkin Drive.

As you walk through the front door, you are led either towards a handy downstairs toilet or a spacious living room, which then heads out into a lobby area through to an impressive kitchen/diner.

Upstairs, the master bedroom takes up over a third of the width of the house, which also has a large built-in wardrobe and an en-suite toilet.

One of the other three bedrooms also comes with a built-in wardrobe and bay area, while another has a handy storage cupboard – with the main bathroom situated nicely between the rooms.

Outside, you will be met with a 25ft long garden which is laid to patio and Astroturf.

The property comes with a garage to the side of the driveway, with enough room to park at least two vehicles.

Within just four miles of the front door, three railway stations will give you ideal access into other Essex towns and central London. Harlow Mill is 2.1 miles away, Harlow Town is 2.6 miles away and Sawbridgeworth is located 3.8 miles away. As for schools, there are 18 different local schools on offer within the area – 14 of which have been graded as 'Good' or above by Ofsted.

INMAN'S PLACE IS CERTAINLY NOT FREE

With his camp style, risqué jokes and catchphrase "I'm free" John Inman became one of TV's most popular actors playing shop assistant Mr Humphries in the 1970s and 1980s sitcom Are You Being Served?

The Lancashire-born actor was suited to the role. Inman had been interested in dress making as a child and before becoming an actor had worked for men's outfitters Austin Reed.

Prior to Are You Being Served? he had enjoyed a successful career in London's West End, going on to appear in several high-profile productions and later TV shows.

Are You Being Served?, which followed a group of floor

John Inman lived in this beautiful Little Venice house for 30 years staff working in an old-fashioned department store, first appeared in 1972 and was soon attracting audiences of up to 20 million, making Inman a household name.

His success brought him considerable wealth and Inman lived in a luxurious house in London's Little Venice neighbourhood for more than 30 years with his civil partner Ron Lynch. Inman died in 2007 leaving his multi-million-pound fortune and house to Lynch, who has now also passed away.

Their former home, which is a three-bedroom townhouse in a gated road near the Regent's Canal with a Blue Plaque commemorating the actor outside, has two reception rooms and a garage, is for sale with agent Sandfords (020 7723 9988) for £2.3 million.

Heartbreaker

The world of rock and roll last month said goodbye to one of its originals when Tom Petty died aged 66 following a heart attack. A prolific songwriter, the down-to-earth musician sold more than 80 million records and had multiple hit albums and singles including I Won't Back Down and Free Fallin'. Tom enjoyed success both as a solo artist and with his band The Heartbreakers.

He also played in the late George Harrison's 1980s supergroup the Traveling Wilburys alongside fellow members Bob Dylan, Roy Orbison and Jeff Lynne.

But Tom liked to escape the roar of the crowd. And for that purpose, he bought a house overlooking Lake Sherwood near Malibu in California, nine miles from the Pacific Ocean. Almost every room in the property enjoys superb views.

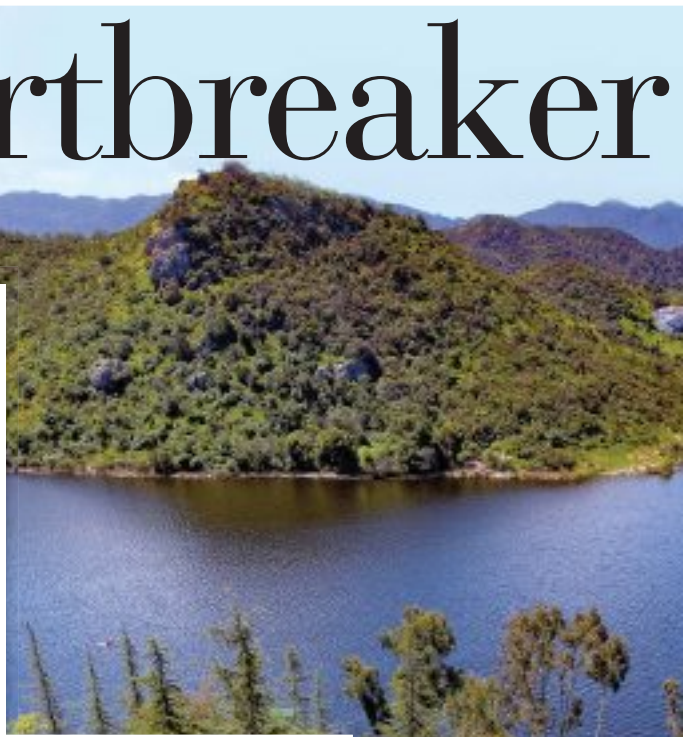

The house, built in 1931 and enlarged by Petty in 2004, only has three bedrooms but has a huge footprint at 5,300 sq ft. Features include natural stone walls made from local rock, two large fireplaces, a Redwood-pannelled bath and huge stone bathtub, a terrace, barrel-tiled roof and vaulted ceilings. For those who like mucking about in boats, it offers access to a private deep-water dock, which is ideal for fishing.

Also, it's one of a handful of houses that is high enough up the hillside to rise above the incredible mists that sometimes engulf the area. It's for sale at $5.895 million.

Fans of Sex and the City will know that author Candace Bushnell, who wrote the original newspaper column that inspired the TV series and films, used her own experiences of dating in New York as her inspiration. Then a freelance journalist, Bushnell wrote her column for the New York Observer during the Nineties about being single and looking for love.

Her columns were published as an anthology, turned into a HBO hit TV series and two movies narrated by and starring Sarah Jessica Parker.

Bushnell did not rest on her laurels after the success of Sex and the City and has since written a string of novels, two of which have been turned into TV shows - Lipstick Jungle and The Carrie Diaries. This later writing was completed at her farmhouse in Roxbury, Connecticut.

It's a pretty yellow clapperboard house built in 1890 - but Bushnell is now selling up. The property comes with a guest house, barn, saltwater pool, orchard and three acres of gardens and lawn. She bought the property in 2005 for £661,500 but is moving to the coast to be close to her friends, it has been reported. Roxbury is popular with celebrities and executives because it's rural, gorgeous and many of the homes are on secluded roads. And New York is only 90 miles away. The property is for sale at $1.15 million via Klemm Real Estate Inc (001 203 599 3945).

Danish record producer, DJ, rapper and singer Lucas Secon has worked with many of the biggest artists on the music scene today, among them Christina Aguilera, Kylie Minogue, Toni Braxton, Snoop Dogg, Olly Murs, and the Sugababes.

Lucas has enjoyed worldwide success with his own songs including a hit album called Lucacentric and a jazz-inspired single Lucas With the Lid Off, which reached No.29 on the US Billboard Hot 100.

He works at his semi-detached house in South London, a four bedroom Victorian property with a two-room recording studio built by him at the end of the garden.

The property, in Peckham Rye, is now for sale at £1.49 million. Agent Paul Bent of KFH says that although the recording equipment will be leaving with Lucas, the wiring for it will remain - should a muso with their own kit want to buy the property. The property also features a roof terrace overlooking the garden.

He says: "The fact that some of the UK's biggest stars have recorded their music in the garden means you'll never be short of talking points when hosting dinner parties."

More information from KFH East Dulwich (020 8031 2588).

SCHOOL'S OUT FOR £30 MILLION

Ever wondered where controversial Arcadia boss Phillip Green or The Mission director Roland Joffé refined their minds? Then look no further than Carmel College in Oxfordshire. Their Grade II and II* former school, which has sat empty since it closed in 1997, is to have a new use.

Well, almost empty. It's been a location for several high-profile film shoots including scenes in the Margaret Thatcher biopic The Iron Lady starring Meryl Streep as well as pop videos for Kylie Minogue and The Kaiser Chiefs. But now the site, which is near the village of Wallingford, is up for sale with planning permission and offers are invited over £30 million.

When redeveloped it will feature 166 homes including houses, apartments and duplex apartments. Its listed synagogue has planning permission to be converted into a swimming pool and café although its boat house, which is also listed, is to be left alone, as is the site's contemporary art gallery.

It has now reverted to its original name Mongewell Park. Parts of the site will include public amenities including the existing amphitheatre, boating lake and tennis courts. Anyone interested should contact Matt Davis at Savills on 01865 269079.

HOME ADVICE

With Alex Neill of Which?

An energy cap should come with smaller bills for all of us

Tories and Labour finally agree to limit what public pays .. but savvy customers must not become the ones who lose out

We are waiting to find out the level at which the new cap will be set

Energy prices and what the Government could or should do about them was one of the hot topics in the General Election earlier this year.

And while the proposed solutions may have differed, the one thing all politicians seemed to agree on was that too many people were being ripped off.

At Which? we were delighted the debate was happening. We've been saying for far too long that action is needed, especially for the millions of people stuck on expensive standard variable tariffs.

So the publication of a draft Bill which could temporarily cap energy prices will be welcomed by many people struggling with their bills – but we will be watching very carefully to make sure there are no unintended consequences for consumers as a result.

Which?

For instance any cap must not cause long-term price increases. Standard tariff customers have seen bills rise by as much as 40% for gas and 35% for electricity over the last decade. And while a cap might see prices drop for these customers in the short-term, it would be worrying if the energy firms used this as an excuse to stealthily increase prices for more engaged customers, who have regularly switched to the cheapest fixed term deals.

The Government and Ofgem – the energy company regulator – must ensure there's a rigorous process in place to make sure a cap is set at a fair level and that the market is continually monitored.

The measures must also be careful not to stifle innovation such as smart meters which help customers monitor their energy, or remove incentives for energy firms to improve their customer service.

The Big Six suppliers all sit in the lower half of the Which? annual

SWITCH IT UP

While we're all waiting for the proposed price cap to be set and come into effect, Ofgem will still ensure that competition and incentives for people to switch will still be in place. So why not use Which? Switch, change your energy supplier and start saving some money now. Visit switch.which.co.uk for details.

Theresa May and Jeremy Corbyn have both called for a cap energy satisfaction survey because of poor complaint handling and inaccurate bills.

What the Government should really focus on is how to increase competitiveness. We know that people are collectively overpaying by £1.2bn because of a lack of competition in the energy market and that has to change.

Ultimately at Which? we believe that the result of the cap must be a better functioning, truly competitive energy market, where everyone involved is getting a good deal.

We don't think it's too much to ask.

GARDENING

BRIGHTEN UP YOUR PATIO

Perk up your winter pots to keep them looking fabulous over the festive season, says Hannah Stephenson

The garden may look bleak in winter, but your patio pots can liven things up, whether you're adding winter flowers, berries or bright foliage to the mix. So pick a milder, frost-free and preferably dry day and start adding some colour to your winter garden.

1. UNDERPLANT CLIMBERS WITH WINTER PLANTS

If you have climbers in pots next to the house, whose leaves have fallen and are now offering no colour or interest, use the bare space to underplant them with brightly coloured winter flowering plants such as cyclamen, heather, variegated ivy or ornamental cabbage. Cyclamen should do well in sheltered areas out of the rain, as they will suffer if they are too wet or over-watered.

2. LET EXISTING POTTED CONIFERS BECOME A FOIL FOR WINTER BEDDING

Keep conifers you had in pots as a backdrop to summer bedding, but fill up the spare space with new and different winter stalwarts. Good candidates include Skimmia 'Rubella', violas and winter-flowering pansies, which should flower until the worst weather hits but will re-emerge to bloom again in spring. Also, wintergreen (Gaultheria procumbens) which bears festive red berries, or burgundy-leaved ajuga.

3. LEAVE ORNAMENTAL FLOWERHEADS ON PERMANENT PLANTINGS

If you have permanent plants such as hydrangeas (left) in containers, leave the flowerheads on, which will not only add winter interest but also protect the plant from the worst of the weather.

Make sure you choose large plants and place them close together for immediate impact, as they won't grow very much in winter.

Place your container where it will get as much light as possible during the shorter days of winter, to help the foliage remain green and healthy.

Water plants carefully, making sure you don't saturate them, but at the same time checking the compost to ensure it hasn't dried out. Poor watering is the main reason so many plants perish in the cooler months.

The pink and purple of cyclamen can help brighten up your garden

WHEELS

FIRST DRIVE: Fiat Fullback Cross by David Ward

Having already jumped into bed with Mitsubishi last year to enable them to bring their first ever purpose-built pick-up truck to the UK market, Fiat bosses have progressed to the next natural step of going the whole hog by now introducing a fully-fledged off-roader version called the Fullback Cross.

Like the earlier Fullback this up-market genuine off-roader version is based on Mitsubishi's best-selling L200 pick-up which means Fiat can't really go wrong for entering this burgeoning niche in the car market where total sales are already 10 per cent up this year. With the development of a new car from scratch costing literally millions of pounds it's little wonder there's a continuing increase in model sharing in the car making business and in this case it simply makes commercial sense for Fiat to utilise Mitsubishi's know-how and its subsequent success in the pick-up market.

So the Thailand-made Fullback Cross has much of the L200 mechanics and engineering hardware under its skin, including the four-wheel-drive system and the same 2.4-litre 177bhp turbocharged diesel engine.

Similarly there's the choice of a five-speed automatic gearbox or a six-speed manual gearbox and this Fullback Cross is clearly aimed, as with the more expensive L200 versions, to those people called 'lifestylers.'

These motorists want car-class comforts but a real rugged 4x4 that's versatile, looks different and can be used as daily transport then come the weekend a leisure vehicle that can tow a boat, pair of jet ski bikes or throw surf boards in the back.

Although identical in many ways to the L200 what Fiat has done is to give their Callback Cross a more upmarket, some would say a more aggressive, look and feel about it with small, subtle cosmetic design changes and loading higher levels of standard equipment on board so that it stands out and is a bit posher from the rest of the so-called lifestyle pick-up trucks.

It has a distinctive touch of black from the outside with black wing mirrors, door handles, wide black coloured wheel arches along with black alloy wheels and real chunky 17-inch black tyres.

For this Fiat incarnation there a new grille with black ingots at the front, satin silver colour skid plates, LED daytime running lights, Bi-Xenon headlights plus an aerodynamic textured black sport bar over the load area at the back.

Talking of load areas this Fullback Cross has a three metre wheelbase, can carry a load of 1.1 tonnes in the pick-up space and is able to tow up to 3,100kg and whilst most such pick-ups are not renowned for being too manoeuvrable this one has a turning circle diameter of 11.8 metres - best in class.

Inside the double Fiat has again done its own thing by adding their own touches that includes leather heated seats, seven-inch touch screen infotainment system that also includes an efficient sat nav system, Bluetooth, DAB plus there's dual-zone climate control, rear parking sensors, reversing camera and leather steering wheel, plus lane departure warning.

It has hill start assist but disappointingly for drivers who do serious off-roading up and down really steep terrain there's no hill descent but there's plenty of safety features on board, including seven airbags and also electronic stability control and trailer stability assist for those drivers who will be busy towing.

FIAT'S PICK-UP SUCCESS

What's it like to drive? Fine really with no quirks and in all honesty similar to the L200 which is understandable with such identical engineering underneath and after a first drive clearly the automatic gearbox version is the one to choose. It's responsive when needed, noticeable quieter and gives a smoother ride out on the motorways than the L200 for example and it only comes a little unsettled when driving briskly around twisty, hilly country roads as on test.

Overall the Fullback Cross is a competent performer, exceptionally comfortable with a few more inside treats than its main rivals and it will do what such 4x4 pick-up drivers want, i.e. a smart, stylish looking vehicle quite at home trundling to the office on weekdays and then doing the leisure activity stuff at the weekends but with a bit of style.

In terms of cost the Fiat versions are slightly more expensive than their L200 counterparts but then they do in comparison have more standard kit on board with the manual version coming in at £26,495 (exclusive of VAT) and the automatic model costing £27,895 (exclusive of VAT).

It was brave but commercially sensible move for Fiat to get into this growing niche sector of the market - Italian bosses say the UK will be their biggest selling market for it followed by Germany, France and then Italy - and first drive evidence shows it's the answer for many motorists looking for the best of both driving worlds but with a bit more style and class about it.

IT'S GOOD TO TALK

Other motorists passing me on the road who might have happened to glance in my direction and noticed I was chatting would have assumed I was using a hands-free kit for the conversation.

I'm not sure what their reaction would have been if they'd realised I was talking to the car.

But that's one of the many impressive features of the Volvo S90, you can talk to it - and even get a reply.

"Set temperature to 20 degrees," I told my four-wheeled friend. And got the reply "temperature 20 degrees".

An instruction to change the radio station to Radio 4 was instantly carried out and again confirmed as was my verbal command to set the sat nav to a business address close by.

And while this might all sound a bit gimmicky it's really a major safety feature. For when you're fiddling with heater controls, radio station buttons or setting satellite navigation systems on the move your eyes are off the road.

The S90 is Volvo's flagship saloon model - and is packed with some very impressive hi-tech kit to satisfy the most demanding of drivers.

With the Bowers & Wilkins surround sound system fitted, for example, you can even mimic the acoustics of the Gothenburg Concert Hall when you play your favourite piece of music.

TEST DRIVE: Volvo S90 D4 Inscription by Edward Stephens

This is an up-market executive car that's a credible alternative to the large saloons built by the premier German brands. It's stylish, oozes quality and offers excellent ride quality thanks to electronic air suspension at the rear.

The interior is plush and business-like with high quality soft leather seats, a large centre-set, iPad-style touch screen and traditional twin dials (speedometer and rev counter) immediately in front of the driver.

To make them even more efficient the analogue speedometer has a digital readout at its centre and both dials increase the light intensity around the speed and revs registering at any given time so your eye goes straight to that point.

Despite its size the S90 is powered by a four cylinder engine of just 2.0-litres, in line with Volvo's commitment three years ago to restrict engine sizes in all its models.

At the time a few eyebrows were raised. But a week of driving an S90 has just proved to me that any doubts were misplaced.

The 190bhp engine is smooth, quite and refined, has plenty of power and is a delight to drive.

Mated to a seamless eight-speed automatic gearbox it offers relaxed high speed cruising but with the ability to react instantly when you need dynamic acceleration.

There is no Sport alternative on the automatic gearbox but you can change the car's overall setting from comfort to Dynamic to sharpen performance - including holding onto the gears for longer.

On the road the S90 feels solid and well planted at all times and is brilliantly fluid through twists and turns on country roads with confidence-instilling road holding.

And despite its size the S90 is simple to park thanks to its all-round cameras which give you an on-screen view of the car from above so you can see exactly what's around you at all times.

If you are still not sure this car will even park itself, with you just controlling the brakes and accelerator.

Volvo seems to have thought of everything on the S90.

MOTORING NEWS: by Stewart Smith

SEAT RELEASES NEW LEON CUPRA

FRESH from its debut at the Frankfurt Motor Show the Leon Cupra R, SEAT's most powerful car to date, is now available to order priced at £34,995.

But fans better get in quick as a limited production run has been announced and just 799 models will be built for global sale in the first half of 2018, of which 24 are initially destined for the UK.

Based on the Leon Cupra 300, SEAT's R&D team has upgraded the car with a series of enhancements to create the Cupra R.

Among the improvements on the technical side are a new steering system, modified camber angles on the front axle, four piston Brembo brake callipers and crucially, a retuned exhaust system with even racier note.

In terms of performance, the Leon Cupra R is limited to 155mph and will despatch 0-62 mph in just 5.8 seconds.

In the UK, the new front-wheel-drive SEAT Leon Cupra R, boasting 310bhp, will be available with a six-speed manual gearbox.

The equipment specification of the Cupra R offers keyless entry, a wireless phone charger, heated front seats and headlight washers, rear view camera, a safety pack with tiredness recognition system and rear seatbelt reminder.

It also has a BeatsAudio sound system with 10 speakers, adaptive cruise control and a navigation system with an eight-inch touchscreen.

The Leon Cupra looks have also been given even greater impact in R form, through carbon fibre details for the rear spoiler, lower lip spoiler, side skirts and rear diffuser. The newly extended wheel arches and the front also benefit from a more powerful design around the air intakes.

Two metallic paint options are available, Monsoon Grey and Midnight Black, both of which are included in the car's price.

ROAD TEST: Dacia Logan MCV Stepway SE Summit dCi 90 by Lee Gibson

LOGAN GETS RUGGED

Dacia has had quite an impact on the UK car market since it launched here in January 2013.

It's simple 'You do the math' message, extolling the cheap and cheerful virtues of the Romanian car maker, quickly gained traction in austerity-era Britain.

So much so that the Renault-owned brand enjoyed the most successful start ever in the domestic market and now, nearly five years later, has shifted more than 100,000 units.

The latest model to join this cut-price crusade is the Logan MCV Stepway – a jacked-up more rugged looking version of the Logan MCV family estate.

Following in the footsteps of the Sandero Stepway hatchback, this newcomer aims to cash-in on the seemingly unquenchable thirst for SUV-styled cars – crossovers as they've become known.

The chunky cladding and elevated ride height are purely for show here though as, unlike some more expensive rivals, the Logan MCV Stepway does not offer a four wheel drive option.

What it does offer is masses of practical family space – the MCV stands for maximum capacity vehicle – in a no-frills package that comes in cheaper than some second-hand hatchbacks.

There is plenty of leg and headroom all round and three adults will be happy enough in the back on all but long-haul trips, with no large transmission tunnel to hinder the one in the middle.

The boot, at 573 litres, is among the the largest in any class and rises to 1,518 litres with the 60/40 split rear seats folded. A large square opening and low load lip also make life easier when loading bulky or heavy items. A trip to Ikea will hold few fears for this motor.

Power comes from a choice of two economical engines that have widely proved their worth in the Renault range.

A turbocharged three-cylinder, 0.9-litre petrol looks a little light on power on paper to pull a car of this size, especially when fully loaded, but the 1.5-litre diesel in the car I drove is ideal for the job.

Although not the quickest when accelerating, this unit, paired with a five speed manual transmission, offers plenty of mid-range pull and inspires much more confidence that it would cope when that capacious boot is filled.

Both powertrains are accompanied by a gearshift indicator and an eco mode to help the driver eke the most out of full tank, with impressive average fuel economy of 80.7mpg claimed for the diesel, and the set-up is very much focused on easy, unhurried driving.

This laid-back character is reflected in the Logan MCV Stepway's supple suspension, which deals well with the vagaries of UK roads but also means there is some roll evident in corners.

Of course, there have to be some compromises in bargain-basement priced cars and that's often most evident in the interior fixtures and fittings and equipment levels.

Dacias are no exception and there is a lot of scratchy, unyielding plastic on show around the cabin and everything, although solidly put together, has a slightly dated look.

Stepway models, however, are only available in higher grades – Laureate and SE Summit in the Logan MCV's case – and, therefore, avoid the really Spartan feel of entry-level vehicles.

SE Summit trim is exclusive to Stepway models and the brand's Duster 4x4 and uses splashes of colour to lift the interior and extra kit to enhance perceived quality.

The upholstery features burnt orange contrast stitching and embroidered Stepway logos, with the same colour used to pick out the centre console and air vents.

This flagship spec also adds a rear parking camera and front central armrest to the Laureate equipment list, which already includes air con, touchscreen multimedia system with sat nav, DAB radio, Bluetooth, electric windows, rear parking sensors and cruise control.

All of which make this a compelling package for families on a tight budget – or those who see a car as just that, rather than a fashion accessory, and would sooner spend their money elsewhere.

It's functional, frugal and affordable without sacrificing all of the creature comforts.

MG's new ZS now available at Perkins

MG Motor UK has increased its offering in the Compact SUV and small Crossovers market with its all-new MG ZS. It's been described as the SUV with design excellence, engineering innovation and affordable style. And it's now at Perkins Garage, Braintree

The MG ZS, a global car that's been reengineered specifically for UK drivers, attracted significant attention when it was officially unveiled at the London Motor Show earlier this year. With the entry-level model available on the road from just £12,495, MG are continuing to follow their successful affordable cars of good quality pattern. And there are a host of competitive finance offers too.

Perhaps the headline feature is the 7-year or 80,000-mile warranty that comes as standard across all the variants. It is a real testament to MG's confidence in the quality build of this vehicle. It is transferable too, so that when you want to change your car in the future, whether to sell it or trade it in for part exchange, the warranty goes with it too. It is one of the longest fully transferable warranties in its class.

Top-Spec Tech, Eco-Engines and Superb Space

So, what else will you get with this all-new MG ZS? It has some top-spec technology. There's Bluetooth hands-free and remote central locking across the range and an industry-leading 8-inch touch sensitive infotainment screen, supported by DAB radio on the Exclusive and Excite models. These models also have Apple CarPlay, which takes the things you want to do with your iPhone while driving, and puts them on the car's in-built display. All very safe.

The engines have been given a lot of thought, with the future firmly in mind. Customers can choose from a 1.5 DOHC VTI-tech, four-cylinder engine with a smooth and responsive five-speed manual gearbox, or a 1.0 GDI turbocharged, three-cylinder version which complements the six-speed automatic gearbox option. The Excite and Exclusive models also come with three power-assisted steering modes – Urban, Normal and Dynamic – which are designed to give the driver complete control over their ride.

And the space inside – real class-leading. It has generous shoulder, leg and headroom capacities and the split-level boot is an incredible 448 litres, some 60 litres larger than the typical Compact SUV. And families in particular will benefit from numerous compartments throughout the car which provide additional storage.

An Excellent Package

The MG ZS is also European Regulation R129 i-Size compatible in the rear of the car across all models, the Explore, Excite and Exclusive, meaning that it is suitable for all rear-facing child car seats which rely on ISOFIX settings.

All in all, this is one very well thought through package. Completely reengineered by the UK engineering team, this Compact SUV has been tested on UK roads and developed for UK drivers. The all-new MG ZS demonstrates MG's continued commitment to giving the public what they want, quality driving at an affordable price.

Hawks second from bottom after losses

Poor league form continues for Chapman's team

HARLOW Town suffered a heavy 5-2 defeat at Needham Market on Tuesday night, plunging them to second from bottom of the Bostik League Premier Division table.

A frantic start to the game saw a goal apiece in the opening four minutes, with first the hosts going ahead and then Harlow pulling the score level immediately.

Needham Market made the most of a poor clearance attempt in defence to restore the lead, before a third just before half-time gave the Hawks an uphill battle.

Despite an improved showing after the break, the hosts added two more with well-taken finishes to ensure Harlow's points return on the road this season remains at a solitary one.

The hosts went ahead in the second minute when Daniel Morphew headed past keeper past David Hughes. Harlow hit back with four minutes on the clock when James Baker headed down for Jidefo Maduako to stretch a leg out and slot home.

Needham retook the lead on 19 minutes when Gareth Heath fired home from outside the box.

The game then settled down with chances few and far between until ten minutes before the break when Junior Dadson had a penalty appeal turned down.

Needham made it 3-1 on 37 minutes when Luke Ingram rifled into the top corner when the ball arrived at his feet following a goalmouth scramble.

The visitors were a lot more positive at the start of the second half with Alex Read putting a free-kick over the bar, before a rasping shot from the edge of the area saw Daniel Gay save well.

At the other end Hughes was also called into action with a fine stop when Ingram met a header at the back post.

Dadson burst into the penalty area to release a shot at goal, but he saw the effort blocked by diving defenders.

With the Hawks having had a good spell of pressure, they were hit with a fourth goal that killed off the game.

Jamie Griffiths played Jack Simmons in behind the defence, but Hughes was quick off his line to save the one-on-one.

The ball deflected kindly off the keeper back to Griffiths, who hit a first-time volley into the net from 25 yards.

The hosts still had time to pile on the agony for Hawks, and on 70 minutes a counter-attack was finished off by Callum Harrison for a 12th league goal conceded in the last three league games.

Fight

The Hawks are just three points behind bottom placed Tooting and Mitcham.

This Saturday, Harlow travel to Hampton & Richmond Borough in the Buildbase FA Trophy.

■ ON Saturday Harlow lost 4-2 to big-spending Billericay Town, but made a good fight of it as they led twice despite having Ibrahima Sonko sent off.

Andrea Mayasi put the Hawks ahead from a free-kick in the 20th minute before Sanchez Watt's header drew Billericay level.

Sonko saw red on the hour mark after his second yellow card, but the Hawks immediately retook the lead through Dadson.

The visitors equalised from the penalty spot through Jake Robinson, before Adam Cunningham's low drive put them ahead.

With Harlow pushing for a late equaliser, Billericay countered to hit their fourth through Louie Theophanous and kill of any hopes of a point.

Team GB put their Faith in Harlow triathlete Jackson-Lee

HARLOW triathlete Faith Jackson-Lee has been selected to represent Team GB at the half Ironman distance next year in Ibiza.

Jackson-Lee, who is 40, will compete in the 40-44 age category for the event next October.

She qualified based on a race earlier this season at the Cotswold 113 Classic Tri at Ashton Keynes Water Park, where she clocked a personal best of 5hr 14 min 29sec.

Her splits for the event, which was also her personal best, were: swim 28:04, bike 2:50:56, run 1:50:37 – for an overall time including transitions of 5:14:29, to finish eighth in her age category.

Half Ironman distances are: 1.2 mile swim, 56 mile bike ride and 13.1 mile half marathon run.

Jackson-Lee is also training for her first full Ironman distance race in Germany in July so has two big events to look forward to.

A member of Harlow Triathlon Club, she has been doing triathlon since 2014 and trains between eight and ten hours every week, six days a week.

Jackson-Lee's strongest discipline is swimming – she is normally in the top two or three out of the water. Her biking improved massively in 2017, and her half Ironman time was some 30 minutes quicker than the previous year.
